

Nigel Cook

Personal Qualifications and Experience

Nigel Cook was trained as an imagery analyst by the Royal Air Force. He served in this role for 12 years, undertaking the detailed analysis of different imagery types and producing reports for UK and overseas agencies. Following his RAF service, Mr Cook joined North Yorkshire Police Scientific Support Department, where he worked for over 15 years, in the roles of Technical Process Officer and Crime Scene Investigator. These roles involved the photography of crime and road traffic collision scenes, as well as exhibits within a laboratory. Specialised light sources and image enhancement software were also utilised for much of the work. During this time he provided written statements and presented evidence in both Magistrates and Crown courts.

Mr Cook joined Keith Borer Consultants in 2014. He primarily works on cases involving video or photographic evidence, including the identification of people, objects or vehicles and the analysis of events or actions. He has produced over 200 forensic imagery reports and has given evidence in Magistrates and Crown courts, as well as the Court of Appeal. Mr Cook also undertakes photographic and video work, including post-capture editing and the production of DVDs or still image booklets.

Keith Borer Consultants operates a Continuous Professional Development Scheme for all staff. Within the scheme Mr Cook undertakes regular training and development. He is also a member of the Chartered Society of Forensic Sciences.
